

MORRIS PLAN IS STUDYING TO AVERT THRIFT BOND LOSS

Hopes to Find Way to Save 11,000 Wage Earners From Scheme's Failure.

The Morris Plan Company is seeking a plan to save 11,000 wage earners from loss facing them as a result of the National Thrift and Bond Corporation's failure. Nothing definite has been decided upon so far, George J. Schultz, General Manager of the Morris Plan, said to-day, but the matter is being considered.

"The Morris Plan is so radically different in its underlying conception," Mr. Schultz said, "that to take over bodily the assets and liabilities of the Thrift Corporation is impossible. We do not deal in bonds or stocks."

"I want to emphasize that if the investors in Thrift Bonds are patient and hold on to their certificates they will not lose a cent, for the securities are bound to go up again and their payment at par is assured finally. It may take years, according to the life of the underlying securities, but full payment is assured."

"Nevertheless, the Morris Plan Company is attempting to work out a plan which will enable the small investors to come out with little or no loss, even if they have to have money before the bonds mature."

From another source it was learned that some months ago, when it became evident the National Thrift Bond Corporation must be turned over to the State Bank Examiners, the Morris Plan Company rejected a proposition to take over the business of that concern. The reason for this action, it was said, was because of the inherent differences in conception between the two plans and the danger to Morris Plan investors, such action might involve.

Sunday Baseball Advocate Quits. J. DuPratt White has resigned from the Board of Trustees of Upper New York, N. Y., and there is a difference of opinion as to the cause. A member of his family said he had resigned because he has gone to Europe, while other reports say that he quit because the board refused to allow the guests of Dr. Pierre A. Bournard, who used to be known as "Omni the Omnipotent," to play Sunday baseball.
